CODE OF ETHICS IN RESEARCH

Banasthali Vidyapith, established in 1935, is the world's largest residential university for women, doing pioneer work in its field for more than eight decades. Banasthali's unique and innovative educational ideology, Panchnukhi Siksha (five-fold education) comprises of, practical, aesthetic, intellectual and physical, above all moral aspects which develop an integrated and balanced personality of the students besides providing the requisite professional training. While, most students learn ethics at home, at school, and other social settings, the campus ethos of Banasthali naturally imbibe high moral values. The Vidyapith believes in simple living and high thinking. Banasthali aims at synthesizing and balancing scientific achievements and spiritual values of the east and of the west to prepare women for enlightened leadership roles in all walks of life. The Vidyapith has kept pace with the changing times but has never compromised with its core principles. In fact the residents of Banasthali learn the sense of right and wrong from its serene and pious campus environment.

Banasthali is a comprehensive university offering graduate, post-graduate and PhD programmes in a vast variety of disciplines such as Arts, Humanities, Social Sciences, Biotechnology, Bio-science, Computer Science, Mathematical Sciences, Physical Sciences, Electronics, Engineering, Earth Sciences, Fine Arts, Management, Aviation, Science, Education, Home Science, Design, Pharmacy, Law, Commerce and Journalism & Mass Communication.
